Is one's race correlated with whether or not a citation is issued during a traffic stop?

As an American citizen, I am no stranger to racial discrimination and racial dialogue. This can come from any race and be directed at any race, however one group of people are accused of being racist more than any other group. That group is the police. I wanted to see just how much race is correlated with being issued a citation, so I pulled traffic stop data from my home state of Massachusetts. My null hypothesis is that race is correlated with citation issuance. Through thorough investigation, I was gladly proved wrong, and found there was little to no correlation. Please refer to the README.md file in this repository for my research.
